"TOWN TOPICS" GOT $10,000 FROM MRS. C. P. HUNTINGTON

For Her Copy of "Fads and Fancies"-William R. Travers Wanted to Prosecute for Libel, but Can't-Grand Jury to send for Books Withheid From Jerome.

It came out yesterday that Mrs. Collis P. Huntington paid $10,000 for her copy, not yet delivered, of the Town Topics book Fads and Fancies.

Besides a refusal of the Town Topics people to let the District Attorney see the coks of account of that concern with Presiding Justice Deuel of the Special Sessions Court-a refusal that will be followed y an invocation of the Grand Jury's powers to inquire-the most interesting of yesterday's developments as an indication of the temper of the sufferers was the appearance of William R. Travers at the District Attorney's office. In the last number of Town Topics there were several paragraphs congratulating his wife on getting a divorce from him. It referred to him as "a social outcast," so far as the Vanderbilts, Astors, Harrimans and others were concerned, and said that "Newport society has decided that Billie Travers, as a husband, has grown

Mr. Travers's friends decided that now was the time to get after Town Topics. One of his friends telephoned to Assistant District Attorney Gans, and Mr. Gans told him to send Mr. Travers along. Mr. Travers thought that the article was the basis for a criminal action for libel, but after looking it over Mr. Gans decided that there was no ground for a criminal pro-

Assistant District Attorney Krotel began to examine the books of Town Topics yesterday afternoon, but his examination was blocked. He was not allowed to see what disbursements were made to Justice Deuel. Everything else apparently was free to Mr. Krotel's inspection.

As a result, it is quite probable that Justice Deuel, W. L. Daniels, secretary and treasurer of Town Topics, and Moses Ellis Wooster, who got the subscriptions for the Town Topics book and then started the Society Editors' Association, will be subposped to appear before the Grand Jury to-day or to-morrow.

There is no longer any attempt to disguise the fact, that while Mr. Jerome is very anxious to find out all he can about "Fads and Fancies," he has also decided to look into Justice Deuel's connection with Town Topics. Justice Deuel is a director in the company that publishes Town Topics. If it were shown by the books of Town Topics that Justice Deuel had accepted renumeration for legal services for Town Topics or for W. D. Mann, that might form the basis for proceedings looking toward Justice Deuel's removal from the bench. It turned out yesterday that the representatives of Town Topics agreed to allow an inspection of their books on condition that the names of the subscribers to "Fads and Fancies" were not made public. Edward Lauterbach, counsel for Town Topics, got Mr. Jerome to agree to this proposition on Monday night, after Grand Jury subpomas duces tecum had been served on Justice Deuel and Secretary Daniels. It was said esterday that Mr. Lauterbach agreed that Mr. Jerome or his representatives were not only to have access to the books of "Fads and Fancies," but to all the books of Town

It was with this understanding that Mr. Krotel went to the office of Town Topics vesterday afternoon. He was accompanied by a stenographer and an accountant. He had been instructed by Mr. Jerome not to make public under any circumstances the names of the subscribers. After Mr. Krotel left Town Topics he refused to say a word about what information he had obtained.

Indirectly it was learned that Mr. Krotel and his assistants were met at the office of Town Topics by Daniels and a representative of Mr. Lauterbach. What happened after that was gathered piecemeal. Mr. Krotel, it is said, saw the books showing the list of subscribers to "Fads and Fancies" and how much was paid by each subscriber. There does not seem to have been any objection to Mr. Krotel seeing anything about other transactions, for instance W. D. Mann's relations with the company, but came to a certain page that concerned discursements to Justice Deuel the bars were put up. The representative of Mr. Lauterbach is said to have told Mr. Krotel that he would have to stop right where he was, and took the book away from the accountant. There were some words, but the sould have to stop the same words, but as no disposition was shown by the Town Topics people to recede from the position taken. Mr. Krotel went away.

It is pretty definitely known that Mr. Krotel discovered certain things that will demand a great deal more investigation.

It is just possible that Justice Deuel will have to de some of the avalation. have to do some of the explaining.

"If Justice Deuel says that he has not got anything personally it is because the final division was not to be made until all the expenses had been paid," said Wooster. He mentioned casually that the lowest sum paid for "Fads and Fancies" was $1,500. It was then recalled that a few days ago Justice Deuel said that some of the copies of the book were to be more magnificent than the others. As to those prominently mentioned in the book a reporter wanted to know at that time if Senator Depew came in for any particular notice. To this Justice Deuel replied:

"No. If one man is any more prominent in the book than another it is Collis P. Huntington."

SAW HUSBAND AND SON DROWN Woman and Five Children Watched Bodies on the Beach All Day Long.

and twenty chapters are to be issued.

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., July 18.-George A. Hulse, a carpenter, of Good Ground and his eleven-year-old son were drowned vesterday in a pool twenty feet deep, in sight of Mrs. Hulse and her five small children, all of whom had gone down to the beach at Sebonie Creek for a week's outing.

When the family went to the beach in the morning Alfred the eleven-yearold boy, went in bathing. He waded out in the creek, when suddenly his father saw him sink in a pool. When the little fellow came to the surface the father was wading out in the water to rescue him. Just as the boy was going down for the third time the father grabbed him, and he, too, was sucked into the pool.

Both disappeared and neither body came to the surface again.

After the two sank Mrs. Hulse waded out to the edge of the pool, and she could see distinctly the bodies of her dead husband and son lying at the bottom, but was unable to get them out. She ran along the beach for about a mile and came along the beach for about a mile and came upon a man who was digging for clams. She pleaded with him to aid her in getting the two bodies out of the water. The two hurried back along the shore, and with the aid of a hook the two bodies were taken rom the water and laid on the beach.

The case was reported to the Coroner but it was after 8 o'clock last night whe he reached the scene. Mrs. Hulse remained with the bodies on the beach all day, keeping guard over them and waiting for the Coroner. With the exception of her five small children she was alone with the bodies. The little children were constantly crying for their father and brother. in a hysterical state.

Hulse was 35 years of age and lived near Charles F. Murphy's place at Good Ground

FATHER CAN'T KEEP DAUGHTER, Thinks the Referee, Because of the House keeper Who Lives There.

Michael J. Mulqueen, as referee, has reported to the Supreme Court that in his opinion Isaac C. Bishop, who is in the liquor ousiness on Ninth avenue, should not be allowed to retain the custody of his eighteenyear-old daughter Miriam, even though the girl is anxious to stay with her father.

Bishop's wife is an inmate of the Amityville Asylum for the Insane, and since her removal there some years ago he has had a housekeeper, Mrs. Sadie Hess, whom, he told Referee Mulqueen, he intends to marry as soon as his wife dies. She has had charge of his daughter, and the latter is said to be much attached to Mrs. Hess. When the trio travelled West, it was testified, they were booked as "Mr. and Mrs. Bishop and

Bishop also has three sons, and one of these, Leo, has no great fancy for the in-trusion of Mrs. Hess into his father's house-hold. Leo is married himself and lives in hold. Lee is married himself and lives in The Bronx, while the father lives in West The Bronx, while the father lives in West Fifty-first street. Some time ago Leo sued out a writ of habeas corpus for Miriam, alleging that she was unlawfully detained by her father and that because of Mrs. Hess's presence the house was no place for a young girl to be brought up. The father resisted the habeas corpus proceedings vigorously, and Miriam took his part. It then developed that there was a very decided split in the Bishop household, with the song arrayed against the father, and the sons arrayed against the father, and all on account of Mrs. Hess. The pro-ceedings were then referred to Mr. Mul-queen to take testimony and report.

The referee says that he is regretfully forced to the conclusion that her father's home is not a proper place for Miriam under the circumstances, and that her continuance there might tend to endanger her moral and future welfare.

WANT STEPMOTHER OUSTED. Daughters of Inventor Stephen W. Wood Seek to Gain Control of His Estate.

Mrs. Catherine Paye of Douglaston

N. Y., and Mrs. Cornelia Driscoll of Pasadena, Cal., daughters of the late Stephen W. Wood, an inventor, of Newark, have brought suit in the New Jersey Court of Chancery to restrain Edith Wood, who says she is their stepmother, from disposing of any property left by their father and also to oust her as executrix of his estate. Wood invented among other things the automatic mule, which put the real mule out of business on the towpath. The device is said to be in use on several canals in this country and Germany. He died on Feb. 26 last and his daughters did not learn of his death until after Mrs. Wood had taken out letters of administration. The complain-ants have filed affidavits setting forth that their father was known as a single man and that the defendant was known as Miss

Dayton.

Mrs. Wood alleges in her answer that Wood married her by putting a wedding ring on her finger and saying that she was his wife. She declares that he didn't believe in religious ceremonies. She says she wasn't aware that he had any daughters that the precedings were started and until the proceedings were started and neither did she know that he had ever been

BOAT BUILDER KING CONSCIOUS, BUT COULDN'T TELL STORY.

Bullet in Head Had Paralyzed Him-His Groans Brought Oarsman to His Aid -Signs of Struggle-Captain of Craft

With Whom He Quarreled Is Missing. William J. Ting, a wandering boat builder and jack of all tracles, was found vesterday morning lying badly wounded and nearly unconscious in the cabin of a small sloop anchored off the foot of Bay Twenty-second street, Bath Beach.

Dr. Bernard Shea of 152 Summit avenue, Brooklyn, a young dentist, who is staying at the beach, heard groans coming from the sloop Aglaie as he passed her in a row-boat about half past 11. He climbed on board and looked down the booby hatch of the cabin, which was open, although the cabin door was shut and locked with a padlock on the outside. As his eyes became accustomed to the dim light within shea discovered King lying in a pool of blood on a bench on the starboard side of the boat.

Receiving only groans in answer to his frightened call, the doctor climbed through the hatchway and bent over the wounded man. He found that King had been shot over the left eye and through the right shoulder. Near by lay two empty cartridge shells of .38 caliber, and on the port side of the cabin another pool of blood showed where King had first fallen. All was disorder in the little cabin, where a strong man had either battled for his life or else thrashed about in mortal agony.

Dr. Shea succeeded in arousing King to semi-consicousness, but received only strange mutterings in reply to his questions. Dr. Shea suspected that the man was paralyzed, and tearing a leaf out of his notebook wrote in large letters: "Who shot you?" and held the writing before the captain's eyes. King could apparently read, but he only shook his head. Then the doctor remembered gossip of the beach, that King of the sloop Aglaie had quarreled with the captain of the sloop Olga about their moorings being too near together With this in mind he wrote: "Did the captain of the Olga shoot you?"

When this was shown to King, the doctor say, she nodded his head and motioned with his left hand toward where the Olga lay. Meanwhile, an ambulance had been summoned and King was taken to the Norwegian Hospital. At the hospital the doctors found that King's right side had been paralyzed by the wound and that the mus-cles in his face had contracted so as to make speech impossible. King is thought to be dying, and great efforts were made to have him write out a statement of the assault, but he could not write with his left hand and soon sank so low that the effort was abandoned. fort was abandoned.

Detective Sergeant Gomeringer of the Brooklyn Headquarters staff assigned to the case, found that the captain of the yacht Olga had left the beach early in the morning after turning his boat over to a man named Branovitz, a waiter in a nearby hotel. Branovitz did not know the captain's name. He said that he met the captain in the hotel and the latter, say-ing that he had been discharged, asked that Branovitz care for the boat until the owner came down. Branovitz did not even know the owner's name.

Later the detectives learned that the Olga was owned by Frederick Comstock, a theatrical manager with offices in New York. They communicated with Mr. Com-stock and he said that his missing captain was John Wellington, who as far as he knew had no residence but the yacht. Mr. mstock said that he had not discharge his man and seemed surprised that a total stranger was in charge of his boat. A general alarm was at once sent out for Wellington, but late last night he was still while examining King's boat the police found a rusty .32 calibre revolver lying under the bench on the port side of the cabin. Its condition showed that it had not been fired in years and the police believe that King used it in an attempt to scare off the man who shot him. The chambers of the pistol were empty and the shells lying near belonged to a larger gun.

The contents of the cabin were untouched and $5 and a watch found on the wounded man did away with the idea that robbery was the motive for the deed. The police were at first inclined to believe that King shot himself, but a search of the cabin king shot himself, but a search of the cabin revealed no weapon with which the shots could have been fired.

Capt. Shepheard of the yacht Dawn, a friend of King's, said that he formerly lived alone at West 214th street and Emerson avenue. He said that king was a very son avenue. He said that king was a very eccentric man and that he had few close friends. He remarked that when he saw the police he thought they had come in search of King, as he was wanted for malicious mischief for destroying a rowboat in the Harlem River and had sailed away from that neighborhood on July 6 to avoid trouble.

Wellington, the missing captain of the Olga, was an old friend of King's, according to the beach loungers. They worked and drank together and as often quarreled, usually over the question of the moorings of the two boats. It was said along the or the two poats. It was said along the beach that Wellington was ashore drink-ing until quite late Monday night. He rowed ashore early yesterday morning, and after turning his duties over to Brano-witz disappeared. vitz disappeare

Late last night Capt. King had not re-gained his speech and the doctors said that there was small chance of his recovery.

he had.

SUBWAY PLANS BOOM REALTY. Significance of the Contracts for Four

New Routes Soon to Be Awarded.

Comment was made yesterday on the fact that although two business days had elapsed since the action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in granting the city's consent to the building of four new rapid transit routes on the island of Manhattan, and the adoption of a tunnel plan, by means of which the residents of Queens and upper Kings are to be landed at Herald Square, in the heart of the dry goods and amusement district, no attention seemed to have been paid to it by financial onlookers.

Probably no more important step was ever taken by a great municipality concerning the transit facilities of its citizens. and surely no municipal undertaking of any kind whatsoever is comparable to it in the dollars and human units involved. By the vote of that board, to which so little attention has been paid, the first important and irrevocable step was taken by which the city, through its constituted authorities, gave its consent to the construction of about $200,000,000 worth of work on the island of Manhattan alone and the employment of about 40,000 men. The further steps intervening between the granting of this consent and the actual Deginning of work are simple and few.

The Rapid Transit Board is now proceeding to obtain consents of abutting property owners along the proposed routes on Third, Lexington, Seventh and Eighth avenues, which are necessary in addition to the consent of the city. Experience shows that these consents are difficult to obtain, and so the Rapid Transit act provides that upon evidence of diligent efforts resulting in failure the courts may be applied to for the purpose of appointing a commission to condemn the right of way. Then the Rapid Transit Board will proceed to draft a contract, which must be referred to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for approval.

This approval obtained, the board will advertise and let the contract at public bilding. It is understood that under certain conditions the board is assured of at least two competitive bidders for this great work, and in the event of the terms being liberally arranged it will be possible to construct this great improvement without overtaxing the city's credit.

The significance of the action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment was not lost upon real estate speculators, who watch these things with very keen interest. The effect on real estate values along the lines to which the city gave its consent has been marked in the last two days, and the announcement of the engineers that there is no reason why at least two of these lines should not be in full operation within four years after the contract is signed has had the effect of stimulating trading activity and raising values.

The interest of the general public in the letting of this contract centers in the promise of the Metropolitan Street Railway interests that they will compete for the building of these roads, and if successful will secure to all passengers of the new subways the free use of 600 miles of surface lines by means of a transfer for a single fare. As the Metropolitan interests have secured the cooperation of John B. McDonwho constructed the present subway, and Mr. Deyo, its chief engineer, the benefit of great experience is assured in the new construction, whereby all the defects which operation has developed in the present subway will be avoided, and even greater speed and train frequency will be possible.

STATISTICIAN HYDE GETS OUT

COTTON LEAK BRINGS COMPLETE REORGANIZATION.

Besignation Offered and Accepted After Conference With Sceretary Wilson -New Men and New Methods in the Bureau-Hoped to Close All Leaks.

WASHINGTON, July 18 .- The expected appened to-day when James Wilson, the Secretary of Agriculture, announced that John Hyde, the Chief Statistician of the Department, had handed in his resignation, and that it had been accepted, to take effect Willett N. Hays, the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, has been temporarily placed in charge of the division of statistics pending the appointment of Mr. Hyde's successor. The vacancy may be filled in a few days, and it may not be filled for several weeks. That is a detail that will be considered in connection with Secretary Wilson's plan to reorganize the crop reporting section of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Hyde's letter to Secretary Wilson, announcing his intention to retire on the ground of ill health, and the latter's reply are couched in the language customary on such occasions, and there is nothing in the correspondence that would indicate that Mr. Hyde's resignation was influenced in the slightest degree by the disclosures in the division over which he has presided for any years. Mr. Hyde's letter to the Secretary follows:

"DEAR MR. SECRETARY: During the last four years, or since I succeeded in making the crop reports of the Department rea-sonably accurate and correspondingly valu-able to the agricultural and commercial interests of the country, my administration of the office I have the honor to hold has been constantly under fire from one side of the market or the other. Five times it has been investigated, and on every occasion I have been vindicated.

In January, 1903. I was awarded $2.500 In January, 1903, I was awarded $2,500 damages in a libel suit against a prominent firm of cotton brokers by a jury of their own friends and fellow citizens.

These results have been very gratifying to me, but I have the highest medical authority for the statement that the continued fight upon me has already considerably shortened my life. At the present time it is an accepted fact that a powerful organization is bent upon bringing about my retirement by one means or another
"Now I do not think the position I hold is worth the fight necessary to its retention, and the organization in question is wel-come to whatever satisfaction it can de-rive from my withdrawal from the un-equal struggle. If any of my friends think that I ought not to retire under fire I would have them remember that there is never a time when I am not under

I have the honor, therefore, to tender you herewith my resignation of my ap-pointment as statistician and chief of the bureau of statistics of this Department. With much appreciation of the uniform courtesy and kindness you have shown me and of the many tokens of confidence I have received from you, I am, most respectfully yours,
"JOHN HYDE."

Secretary Wilson's reply is as follows: Mr. John Hyde, Statistician, Department of Agriculture.

*Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your resignation as statistician of this Department. In accepting it I cheerfully testify to the ability with which you have discharged the heavy and difficult duties of the office since you were first appointed. The accuracy of your reports has been recognized by the your reports has been recognized by generally, and I am glad to be able to testify with regard to the charges made against the integrity of the bureau of statis-tics that no facts have been brought to my attention implicating you in any way.

"I am familiar with your devotion to your work and with the untiring efforts ou have made to render the bureau of the highest service to the growers, manu-facturers and consumers of farm products in our country, and I regret that failing health should compel you to bring your work to an end. Very truly yours,

"JAMES WILSON, Secretary."

While Mr. Hyde's integrity has not been while Mr. Hyde's integrity has not been brought into question, it has been known for some time that it would be impossible for him to retain office and his resignation was expected. The Southern Cotton Growers' Association has been after Mr. Hyde for several months, and it would have continued the campaign against the division of tinued the campaign against the division of statistics if Mr. Hyde had been retained as chief statistician.

Secretary Wilson came to the conclusion some days ago that in reorganizing the divi-sion of statistics with a view of reestab-lishing the confidence of the public, radical changes would have to be made both in methods and personnel. It is probable that Mr. Hyde followed the suggestion of the Secretary and decided to retire.

Secretary and decided to retire.

The names of several statisticians have been mentioned in connection with the vacancy. Among these are Le Grande Powers of Minnesota, D. W. Snow of Illinois and Victor Olmsted of North Carolina. The latter was recently appointed associate statistician of the Department, succeeding Holmes. Mr. Powers is at present the argricultural statistician in the Census Bureau. He is a man of ability. the Census Bureau. He is a man of ability, and his work in the twelfth census attracted widespread attention. Mr. Snow is connected with the Orange Judd Company of Chicago.

Cotton representatives have repeatedly suggested that full publicity should be given to all returns and that reports down to the smallest subdivisions should be given out as fast as they are received. This proposal is now under consideration by Secretary Wilson.

ROWERY KEEPS THIS SECRET. Those Who Know Who Killed Eat 'Em Up Jack Won't Tell.

Coroner Goldenkranz held an inquest yesterday in a vain endeavor to fix the responsibility for the death of Eat 'Em Up Jack McManus, but the gang stood pat and refused to tell anything and the Coroner's jury was forced to the formal verdict of death at the hands of an unknown.

Eat 'Em Up Jack McManus, or Thomas McManus, was killed on the night of May 25 near Bleecker street and the Bowery by a gentleman who came up from behind and smashed his skull with a gas pipe. The detectives made more than arrests, and finally hung on to John Bruno, alias Little Chick.

Yesterday witness after witness, all members faithful to the gang, solomnly helped purge Bruno of guilt and then returned to their seats to laugh. Assistant District Attorney Turnbull tried again and again to make them tell what they knew. but as Commodore Dutch put it, "There's

All the exhibits the police had on which to base a chain of evidence were brought forth; one bent and bloody section of gas pipe; John Griffo, alias Young Griffo, prize-fighter and one of the McManus social pipe; John Griffo, alias Young Griffo, prize-fighter and one of the McManus social circle; Frank Trickler, plus two bullet holes; and Jim Kelly, recovered from a knife wound received at a soirée. They were all exhibited, but with no success. Mc-Manus in the days of his prime officiated at the Gotham, the Tivoli, the Brighton and a number of other resorts, but it was as bouncer at McGurk's Suicide Hall on the Bowery that he became famous. He joined Bowery that he became famous. He joined the Paul Kelly gang and rose to be lieutenant, which rank he held when he was killed.

A Poor Cook makes Tasteless Postum

SEND IT BACK

EMAND that it be boiled full 15 minutes AFTER ACTUAL BOILING BEGINS (not only 15 minutes after the pot is put on the stove). A curious chemical change takes place between 12 and 15 minutes after Postum begins to boil. This change releases the food elements and produces a crisp, snappy coffee taste so fetching that the makers have been many times accused of mixing coffee in. But that is false. The full analysis of Postum made by the bestAmerican authorities shows that it is made only of the selected parts of cereal grains treated by com plex methods in the factory.

Postum is Absolutely Pure

and entirely free from the smallest grain of coffee.

Remember you get a charming coffee taste if you insist on having your Postum made right, and that is easy. Full and simple directions on pkg.

Remember also that when you leave off coffee you stop the drugging of stomach and nerve centres and give Nature a chance to heal your ails. In this work Postum is a most powerful aid, for you not only have your hot morning beverage, but take a liquid food containing the very elements Nature must have from which to rebuild the gray matter in nerve centres and brains that have been broken down by coffee.

Ten days' trial works wonders. Small matter what form of stomach, heart, kidney or nervous disease you may have, for the probabilities are that your troubles have originated from a nervow system thrown out of balance by coffee. Prove your own case by leaving off coffee 10 days and using Postum. It may be worth more than a gold mine to you.
